DAGUERREOTYPE. “As to Daguerreotype,” says a later writer, “a woman’s heart is the only true plate for a man’s likeness. An instant may give the impression, and an age of sorrow and change cannot efface it.” This is, perhaps very true. But if you have no living plate on which you desire to impress your features, you cannot do better than to give MR. ORMSBEE a call, at his rooms over the store of Mr. J. D. Kidder, and in a few seconds he will furnish you with your second self, done up in a neat frame, at a trifling cost. Mr. O.’s method combines the latest discoveries in this wonderful art. The likenesses stand out bold and clear, without that misty indistinctness that usually characterizes Daguerreotype impressions. A visit to his “Picture Gallery,” always open, will well repay one his time and trouble.
